In my previous blog, I mentioned how I felt upon hearing the news of the marriage. Today, I had the opportunity to meet him along with that uncle whom I’ve known since my childhood. Although we lost touch during our college and school years, I was pleasantly surprised by his respectful demeanor as he addressed me as “akka.”Today, my happiness was solely for him;

I felt content with my own life. I genuinely rejoiced in his career and future prospects. I extend heartfelt congratulations and best wishes to the future couple.

In case, in the future, you, Shyam (Surali's uncle's son), and Pavithra, read this blog, I want to apologize for my previous emotional expression. However, when I met you and witnessed your kindness, it brought immense happiness and positive vibes. It's not about you or your marriage; it's a common reaction when I hear such news. Once again, I offer my warmest wishes to Shyam and Pavithra for their future together. May you both be blessed and happy…💛
